MAYOR'S MESSAGE

First of all, Thank You for your faith in us on election day. It is always a very humbling experience to be chosen as your representative and I'm sure the rest of the team feel the same way. I'm looking forward to working with the new members and am sure they feel the same way. Thanks also to our past councillors for all your efforts. I'm sure we won't have heard the last of you. You can sit back and smile now when the training on all the "can and cant's" begin. Fun times coming and a very busy construction season looming.

We finally got to do Australia day on the weekend and there was a good turn up in Karumba. Congratulations to all the nominees and winners. As I always say, just being nominated makes you a winner because you are receiving recognition and acknowledgement for your past efforts. All in all, it was a good day mainly due to the efforts of Anne and Amanda, and our trusty old camp cook. Thanks Jockey. (Thanks also to our flagpole consultants Tia and Cynthia).

I was told by a couple of people that my speech was a good one so at the risk of being lazy I'll share the main part of it again in this newsletter because I think it's time, we as a nation started calling bad behaviour and a whole host of other things out for what they are. I have tried to condense it a bit so it won't be exactly the same. It went something like this.

Today I'd like to talk about wokeism. What does "woke" mean? I thought I knew but to be sure I looked it up and did a bit of research. Woke is an American term adopted back in the 1940's or somewhere around then by African/Americans to define someone who was well informed on issues of social injustice.....and in those days it was mainly racism. So, in its original use, it meant being alert to the systematic harm suffered by African Americans.

Newsletter

Unfortunately, recent years has seen it being adopted as a universal watchword for pretty much all varieties of social movements including LGBTQ issues, feminism, climate change, the “green” culture and anything else that may sell. It is flogged to death by both the left and right of politics as well as the media and instead of being a welcoming creed as it once was, it has now become a toxic and divisive term.

John Howard, who has a habit of quoting Bob Hawke at different times said, “You are defined as being Australian by your commitment to Australia”. Bob also said that “Australia can no longer keep going down the road of confrontation and fragmentation which has embittered and disfigured many aspects of the national life”. Most of us here today can relate to those words and the “lucky country” dream because for us it is reality. Our forefathers (of all backgrounds and cultures) would have a different view. They were the ones who went through 2 World Wars and The Great Depression among other events and they did it proper tough. I might add, they did it because they wanted to, to preserve freedom as we know it today. It is well known that hard times breed tough people and good times breed soft people. Unfortunately, we fit into the soft category and our younger generations are the same except we can now add “entitled” into the fold.

Australia is a true multicultural country, and we need to be united to continue the Australian way of life or it will be gone while we are left wondering how it all went wrong. Just here at home in Carpentaria we have Aboriginal, Torres Straight Islanders, European (Covering Germans, French, British, Scots, Irish, Croatians and more), Chinese, Philippine, Vietnamese, Indian, Fijians and last but not least our cousins from over the ditch the New Zealanders. If I’ve forgotten someone, I apologise but you are a hard bunch to keep tabs on.

In a country of “political correctness” it is becoming harder and harder to crack a joke, be critical or even work productively with all the relative rules and regulations forced on us by a bureaucracy gone mad. It seems, we are not allowed to think for ourselves anymore because we may upset somebody or some group who haven’t done anything with their lives except to moan about having less than their neighbour or family and friends. Of course, it has nothing to do with not being willing to help ourselves. No child is born with racism running through his or her veins. It is something that is learnt from others, whether it be family, friends or dare I say it, woke groups including media and governments who are caught up in a world of unrealistic values, concentrating on drama and upheaval instead of working towards a sensible “common sense” approach to fair solutions.

To me all the talk of lost culture is fact, but it doesn’t stop with one group. All our cultures are being lost by changing times.... it’s called evolution. Pretty much like climate change. Carbon Dioxide levels from agriculture and industry have pitifully small impacts on the big picture of evolution. What we need to do is to learn to mitigate, and stop being told by the United Nations and other countries what is right and what is wrong. As time moves on so do our standards, sayings and languages etc. We must evolve with all these changes, or we are lost. I don’t think anyone here will disagree that our cultures have been dramatically changed by the internet also. The passing on of life’s experiences with stories from the oldies has been swallowed up by a screen on a device that is full of games, movies, YouTube, TikTok and my old favourite, not, “Bookface”. Again, this is evolution and something that we as the older generation need to come to terms with, and work with somehow. I don’t think that I could come to terms with one of mine “identifying as a dog or a cat” though, which is happening. Where does this come from?

Newsletter

Australia is sitting at the door of Southeast Asia and while we are being “woke” and worried about who is going to be upset if we say something out of line, China is strengthening its armies and countries such as Taiwan, are bringing back conscription. Taiwan has always had conscription, but the period is now 12 months instead of 4. Whether or not we stand a chance in nuclear warfare, we need to know how to try and survive, administer first aid and a whole host of other things, like treating others with respect, following instruction, getting up, going hard and believing in ourselves because you can guarantee our neighbours are doing it now. Other countries in the world have been growing their defences for ages and Australia needs to make a herculean effort and investment to catch up. Unfortunately, to our fearless leaders War is something like a football game. They have no idea of the realities of life, which is a real worry for us.

Once again, I say, here in Carpentaria, we don't have racism and bigotry as such. This is a reflection of all the people here and for this reason I'll always be proud to be a “Carpentarian”. State and Federal Government policies are slowly but surely whittling away at our existence and idealistic lifestyle here in the Gulf and we as a group need to keep putting things back together regardless, because we know that we depend on each other to keep our world turning. Whatever our differences, we have proven time and again that we can and will work together. As I have said before, we are family, which means we can fight among ourselves, but woe betide an outsider sticking his bib in where it's not wanted or called for. As time goes on it is becoming more and more important that we pull and work together. Maybe Carpentaria can show the rest of Australia how to do it.

Thanks for listening and have a great 2024.

I'll leave it there for this month and will play catch up next time so keep safe,

Jack Bawden.
